

Brain Injury: The Undetected Injury Provider Series

A history of brain injury can result in impairments in physical, emotional, and/or cognitive functioning. Individuals living with brain injury often experience difficulties such as:

- Problems reading social cues or regulating emotion and behavior appear intolerant or belligerent.
- Difficulties organizing or initiating daily activities are misinterpreted as a lack of motivation or laziness.
- Failing to remember instructions or rules are mistaken as noncompliance.

Providers evaluate individuals at high risk of brain injury every day. This three-part series will provide an opportunity to gain a greater understanding about the identification and management of brain injury and post concussive syndrome.
